

Treasurer - Volunteer Position

The Organisation: The Australian Centre for Disability Law (ACDL)

The Australian Centre for Disability Law (ACDL) is a specialist legal centre based in Sydney which operates a disability discrimination law practice across NSW, and a disability and human rights law practice across Australia. It was established as the NSW Disability Discrimination Legal Centre in 1994 to assist persons with disability and their associates to learn about and pursue their rights under the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth).

Our vision is of a society in which persons with disability live with dignity, and in which their human rights and fundamental freedoms are recognised, respected, protected and fulfilled.

ACDL works with persons with a wide range of impairments and disabling conditions. This includes persons with physical, intellectual, and sensory impairments, as well as persons with neurological, psychosocial and some long-term health conditions. ACDL's clients are from socially and financially disadvantaged backgrounds and rely upon ACDL for legal assistance. Legal assistance is provided free of charge.

ACDL operates on the basis of grants provided by the Commonwealth and New South Wales Governments and by the NSW Public Purpose Fund. From time to time, ACDL also benefits from project grants from a number of other government and non-government donors.

ACDL has a small paid staff with a large component of work being carried out by para-legal and solicitor volunteers and under pro-bono partnerships with legal firms and legal practitioners.

ACDL is an independent, non-profit, and apolitical organisation that is incorporated under the Associations Incorporation Act 2009 (NSW). It is a public benevolent institution for the purposes of Australian taxation law and is therefore capable of receiving tax deductible donations.
