About Climates	Climates is a non-profit organisation supporting community-determined climate projects in the Australia-Pacific region. Our vision is an empowered Australia-Pacific that is resilient to climate change. In pursuit of our vision, Climates works in deep collaboration with its partners and mates across the Australia-Pacific in support of projects which realise local visions of climate action.
Position summary	Climates is looking for a volunteer Co-Director to join our executive team as we move into an exciting new phase for the organisation. The role combines responsibilities across operations, governance, partnerships and strategy to achieve Climates' vision of building climate resilience across the Australia-Pacific region with operational planning and volunteer management. The role would suit someone who is passionate about action on climate change, willing to commit to a volunteer role, and looking to build their leadership and management skills and experience and contribute to meaningful, high-impact work.
Key responsibilities	- Support the delivery of Climates charitable objectives, including to build the capacity of Australian-Pacific communities to be resilient to climate change. - Ensure Climates remains financially sustainable - Support the operation of Climates and organisation of Climates volunteers.
Desirable skills and experience	- Understanding of the unique cultural, social, and environmental contexts of Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander, Pacific, or Pacific diaspora communities, and how these intersect with climate change. - Understanding of climate change challenges and opportunities in the Australia-Pacific, with a particular focus on the community needs in the region. - Commitment to promoting equity, inclusion, and justice within the climate movement, and prioritising underrepresented voices in decision-making. - Strong communication skills and an ability to convey ideas and provide guidance. - Ability to work independently and collaboratively in a remote setting. Desirable - Experience managing or supporting volunteers - Experience in not-for-profit strategy, governance, or financial management
How to apply	Candidates are invited to email their resumes to oli.moraes@climates.org.au by 30 September.. Climates is an equal opportunity community, and specifically encourages people belonging to Pacific Island, Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, women in all their diversity, and people with disabilities to apply.
